Backpacker Magazine calls THE NORTH FACE shingle construction "the most efficient system we've seen . . . whereby the batts [of PolarGuard®] are sewn the way slant baffles would be on a down bag, overlapping one another over half their length." (Backpacker 6)

First introduced in 1972, the Bigfoot remains a classic in PolarGuard® design, offering four season protection at a moderate weight and price. Celanese Fortrel® PolarGuard®, a continuous filament polyester fiber dries quickly and resists rot and mildew, making it the ideal insulation for those who love snow camping but hate wet sleeping bags.

Advantages of the shingle method, an exclusive with THE NORTH FACE include no cold spots on the side opposite the zipper, less sewing through the pile, and a totally uniform insulating layer.

Features on the Bigfoot include a double slider #7 YKK coil zipper, ample hood with adjustable drawcord and an oversized offset draft tube and a roomy foot section.
